It is easier to command the vote of the ignorant in a body for the wrong, than that of the wise in a body for the right. If women say all this is speculation and irrelevant, that they have a right to vote and wish to exercise it, the argument is valid. The burden of proof lies with those who deny the existence and the exercise of this right. I deny neither, but only attempt to show that it is a subordinate and comparatively insignificant matter. How will the possession of the ballot affect in any way the vexed question of work and wages? One orator says: Shall Senators tell me in their places that I have no need of the...
