Indeed, these traders were able to monopolize the business because their ships did not cost more than half as much as British ships. Fiske s Critical Period says: An oak vessel could be built at Gloucester or Salem for $24 per ton. On the other hand nowhere in England, France, or Holland could a ship be made of oak for less than $50 per ton ; and even as early as 1727, as Hildreth says, the ship-carpenters in the Thames were driven out of the business, and in 1766 those of New England, Bancroft says, were selling 150 ships annually to the people of Europe and the West Indies. It cannot be doubted, therefore, that one of the most potent reasons why New England rebelled against the British government, was the refusal of that Government to permit the owners of the cheap ships to have a share of the profits of that inhuman traffic; and it is equally as evident, from statements made by Bancroft, that opposition to the slave-trade was the only Southern reason for objecting to British rule. On page 410 of Vol. III he says that the Southern Colonies objected to the dangerous increase of the colored population ; and in Vol. VII, page 84, he says that in 1774 Jefferson, being too unwell to attend a provincial convention, sent a letter in which...
