Excerpt: . . . 11 ment of the Workforce Investment Act of 1998, which requires states and localities to bring together about 17 federally funded employment and training services into a single system - the one-stop system. State UI programs are mandatory partners in the one-stop system. Another mandatory partner is the federal Employment Service, established by the Wagner-Peyser Act in 1933 to link job seekers with job opportunities. The Employment Service has historically been colocated with state UI offices to facilitate UI claimants access to federally funded labor exchanges, job search assistance, job referral, placement assistance, assessment, counseling, and testing. Most Workers Experience Unemployment and Over a Third Receive UI at Least Once On the basis of our analysis of data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics National Longitudinal Survey of Youth 1979 (NLSY79), covering the 23-year period from 1979 through 2002, we found that 85 percent of a nationally representative sample of late baby boom workers - workers born between 1957 and 1964 - had experienced unemployment at least once between 1979 and 2002. Workers who experienced unemployment were unemployed an average of five times over this 23-year period. Moreover, we found that of the 76 percent who were eligible for UI benefits at least once, 38 percent had ever received UI. (See fig. 1.) Of those who received UI benefits, 44 percent received them more than once; this represents about 17 percent of all of the workers in this age...
