Not illustrated. 1868 Excerpt: .the hyenas, the parrots, the tigers, the lion, and all these wild beasts of foreign lands have been more familiar to me from infancy than if I had lived in the torrid zone. Nor was he satisfied with taking us to see them. He told us about them. He bought books for us respecting them. Goldsmith s natural history, with its pictures and anecdotes, is a book for boys that I wonder not to see reproduced in these days. We never tired of it I beg some wise publisher to prepare an edition of it for a reading book in schools. If I mistake not, unless he should leave out the best part, it would have a larger sale, and do more good, than one half of the books now used in our schools. The picture-dealer was a pious man, too. I could never quite understand...
